MARYVILLE
COLLEGE
IN THE GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS

Why study Finance and Accounting at Maryville College?

Accounting and finance are core, seamless parts of every business. Accounting represents the “language of business,” and finance is the art of managing available resources like money or investments. Through case study, collaborative projects, journal readings and problem sets, students in the Finance/Accounting major develop strong critical thinking, analytical and problem-solving skills. Students learn principles of financial reporting and engage in financial analysis. They gain an understanding of the role of money and banking in the economy, as well as the application of budgets and variance analysis in an organization. Through personal attention and small classes, students build a foundation of knowledge and skills that enables them to successfully enter the job market or enter graduate programs in business or accounting.

MEET A CURRENT SCOT

Sydney O'Hara

Hometown: Louisville, Tenn.

After taking her first finance and accounting courses, Sydney knew that the Finance/Accounting major was the right decision for her, and by her junior year, she was preparing for a summer internship with the Dollywood Company's finance department. There, she had the freedom to explore and suggest answers to questions posed to the department. “Building upon skills and knowledge that Maryville College has equipped me with, I was confident in my abilities to complete these tasks and to be challenged in the process,” she said.

Upon graduation, Sydney would like to further her education with a master of accountancy degree and become a certified public accountant.

MEET A RECENT GRAD

Javon Crane '22

Currently: Financial Representative with Northwestern Mutual

During his senior year, Javon juggled both basketball and an internship with Northwestern Mutual, a company for which he's now a full-time employee. With a personal goal of becoming the best financial planner in the Maryville and Knoxville area, he has worked hard to build a professional network, joining the Chambers of Commerce in both counties and participating in the Leadership Blount program

(the youngest person to ever be selected!). He credits MC faculty and staff members for preparing him for the profession.

“They've all been an important part of my journey in becoming an entrepreneur, and Maryville College in general has helped me out in a lot of different ways: trying out new things, learning about different things and getting involved with more people,” he said.
