Why study Finance and Accounting at Maryville College?

Accounting and finance are core, seamless parts of every business. Accounting represents the “language of business,” and finance is the art of managing available resources like money or investments. Through case study, collaborative projects, journal readings and problem sets, students in the Finance/Accounting major develop strong critical thinking, analytical and problem-solving skills. Students learn principles of financial reporting and engage in financial analysis. They gain an understanding of the role of money and banking in the economy, as well as the application of budgets and variance analysis in an organization. Through personal attention and small classes, students build a foundation of knowledge and skills that enables them to successfully enter the job market or enter graduate programs in business or accounting.

MEET A CURRENT SCOT

Owen Sacks

Hometown: Franklin, Tennessee

Owen came to MC for a well-rounded college experience that balanced academics and athletics. A member of the football team, Owen said he cherishes the relationships he has built with his teammates, classmates and professors. “I quickly saw how amazing the support system is and how much the staff and faculty care about the students’ success,” he added. In addition to playing on the football team, Owen also tutors on campus and works at the local Boys and Girls Club. His goals for the future include earning a master’s degree and CPA licensure.

MEET A RECENT GRAD

Colby Vesser '24

Currently: Completing an MBA Degree from the University of Tennessee Haslam College of Business

Undecided on his major when he arrived at MC as a transfer student, Colby took an introductory class in the Finance/Accounting major and knew it was right for him. He also took advantage of the advice and hands-on help provided by MC’s Career Center and professors. As a student he had internships at Dollywood and Financial Executive International (FEI), as well as Whitlock and Company, adding that because of these experiences, he “learned so many technical and soft skills on the job.” Prior to enrolling for the MBA, he was an accounting intern for Clayton and Blackberry Farm.

In addition to studying for the MBA, Colby serves as a teaching assistant in the Haslam College of Business.
